EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT

Proclamation

Whereas, St. Joseph Old Cathedral is the oldest Catholic parish in Oklahoma City, with its first church opening August 4, 1889 and replaced in 1904 with a larger brick church at 307 NW Fourth St., which still stands today; and

Whereas, two weeks after the April 22, 1889, Land Run, the fledgling parish of 16 families began plans to build a church. Work on the 24-x-40-foot wooden structure began July 1, 1889. On Aug. 4, the 650-pound bell for the very first time rang out its joyful call to worship for all to hear; and

Whereas, St. Joseph soon outgrew its wood-framed building. On Oct. 19, 1901, excavation began for the foundation of a 137-x-64-foot brick building. This new church was solemnly dedicated by Oklahoma's first bishop, the Rt. Rev. Theophile Meerschaert on Dec. 18, 1904 and St. Joseph Church become the first cathedral in Oklahoma; and

Whereas, over subsequent decades, the church building, both inside and outside, has undergone several renovations, and has been remodeled numerous times. The most extensive restoration project, however, was necessary by the bombing of the nearby Murrah Federal Building. The old cathedral endured tremendous damage during that megaton explosion. Amazingly, the tabernacle candle remained lit throughout the violent blast and the beautiful old crucifix with its life-size corpus remained unscratched by the flying glass and debris;

Whereas, after being closed for almost two years, on Dec. 1, 1996, a joyful rededication Mass was celebrated in the newly restored cathedral. The happy re-opening of St. Joseph culminated in May 1997 with the solemn dedication of the "And Jesus Wept" statue; and

Whereas, today, St. Joseph Old Cathedral has grown into a vibrant and thriving part of Oklahoma's capital city. Its cosmopolitan and culturally diverse membership enlivens this growing downtown parish. Each year, hundreds of visitors from all over the nation and the globe attend Masses here; some simply stop in to admire its great beauty and to appreciate it for what it certainly is, an enduring testament to God's ever-present love;

Now, Therefore, I, Mary Fallin, Governor, do hereby proclaim May 1, 2015 as
